Women in Construction was originally founded in 1953 by sixteen women working in the industry in Fort Worth. Understanding that women represented only a small fraction of the construction industry, Women in Construction founders organized the group to create a support network. In 1955, the Fort Worth organization gained its national charter after gaining national recognition and changed its name to National Association of Women in Construction (NAWIC). Today, NAWIC provides members with opportunities for professional development, education, leadership training, public service and so much more.

Our core purpose is to enhance the success of women in the construction industry. Your support enables us to reach more women in the industry by providing them tools and resources to help ensure their professional success.

Please consider an Annual Sponsorship this year. We offer multiple levels of sponsorship and additionally have two to three fundraising events that your company is welcomed to underwrite throughout the year.

If you have women in your company that would benefit from being involved with NAWIC, I would be more than happy to speak with them.

Thank You,

Pareena Trochesset
